TROPICAL STORM NESTOR - FINAL UPDATE

North Myrtle Beach, SC – October 18, 2019 – Tropical Cyclone 16 grew up to be Tropical Storm Nestor.

Unless something unexpected happens, this will be our last update on this storm. It continues to head our way and the forecast for our area includes winds between 30-35 mph, perhaps higher along the beach, and rainfall in the range of 2 to 4 inches, maybe higher in some locations.

We may see a lot of rain in a short time frame, so be very careful driving, especially at night. Parts of some roads may flood temporarily. That could also be true of some of the city's low-lying properties.

The forecast path of this storm has not changed but the timing of the storm as it travels along that path continues to change. Now and then, check in to the National Hurricane Center at <https://www.nhc.noaa.gov> to get the latest on the timing of this storm or tune in to your favorite local weather forecaster. ###
